BEACH MANSION TO COST $60,000

FINE RESIDENCE

PLANNED FOR JOHN P. MILLS
AT SUNSET CLIFFS

It is announced that one of the finest residences ever constructed in San Diego is to arise at Sunset Cliffs, the John P. Mills Organization, Inc., having taken out a building permit this week for its early erection at a cost of $60,000. This will be the first of many fine homes to be constructed at that famous scenic site in Ocean Beach.

SILVER SPRAY PLUNGE

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT
AT OCEAN BEACH

Thoroughly renovated, remodelled and repainted the Silver Spray Plunge on the ocean front at Ocean Beach is now open under the proprietorship of J. N. and B. A. Douglass, whose personal attention is given to the management. The plunge will be open to the public every morning, afternoon and evening and nothing has been overlooked toward affording safe and sanitary indoor swimming.

Manager Douglass states that the hot salt water baths are unsurpassed and are particularly helpful to those suffering with rheumatism and like ailments. As a special drawing card ten swims can be obtained for one dollar, with patrons furnishing their own bathing suits and towels; but all such equipment will be supplied by the management when desired and at very reasonable prices. Beach residents and visitors are already acquiring the habit of taking daily or nightly baths in the Silver Spray Plunge.

L. M. Favorite Wins Slot Machine Fight

JUDGE ANDREWS RULES

"JACK" CAUDELL NOT GUILTY
IN COURT TEST CASE

The new vending machines controlled by the Globe Novelty company under the management of L. M. Favorite, do not violate the state gambling law, according to a decision rendered by Judge Andrews in superior court last Thursday. The ruling was made in a test case recently brought by J. E. Caudell, manager of the Mission Beach Amusement Center. The case was taken to the higher court on the plea that the Globe Novelty company slot machines are mechanical, salesmen only and are not gambling devices. A machine was operated in court as proof of the company's claim. The decision is a great victory for "Lew" Favorite, who has fought the fight in San Diego practically single handed and will now place his machines on the market again.

CARPENTER FERRY FOUND A SUICIDE FROM GAS

After being missed for several days, H. A. Ferry, a carpenter about fifty years of age, was found last Tuesday afternoon in a small house at the rear of 5028½ Newport avenue, where he had committed suicide from inhaling gas. His body was in a stiffened condition, huddled over a kitchen gas stove, with a heavy blanket covering his head. His remains were removed by the coroner to the Davis undertaking establishment.

MAKES STRIKING ADDRESS TO POINT LOMA "HI" SENIORS

The first graduation honors awarded at the Point Loma High school exercises last Thursday, June 24.

Following is the very striking and interesting address made by Principal Pete W. Ross to the seven graduating seniors:

You've been "worthy pioneers!" And now you leave us—with high ideals and dreams for future actions, we trust. Don't be ashamed to dream; things have to be dreamed before they are done. And there's much to be done in this good Old World! May you continue to be ready to bear your share of the load, to take the driver's seat, or, better yet, to be

LA JOLLA POST OF
FAMOUS SURPRISE PICTURE

On Thursday and Friday, July 1st and 2nd, the La Jolla Post of the American Legion, will present at the Granada Theatre, La Jolla, the surprise picture of 1926, Renaud Hoffman's picturization, "The Unknown Soldier." Of all the so called war pictures now in vogue, "The Unknown Soldier" stands alone, as the most intensely dramatic, virile, and appealing story of love and war. It is a big theme, finely developed, the settings massive, the incidents stirring, the appeal deeply sympathetic, the various roles exquisitely portrayed. The featured players are Charles Emmett Mack, Marguerite De La Motte, and Harry B. Walthall.

The picture will be shown at the Granada twice daily at no increase in

AT KICKHAM'S M. B. RINK

CONTESTING FOR PRIZES

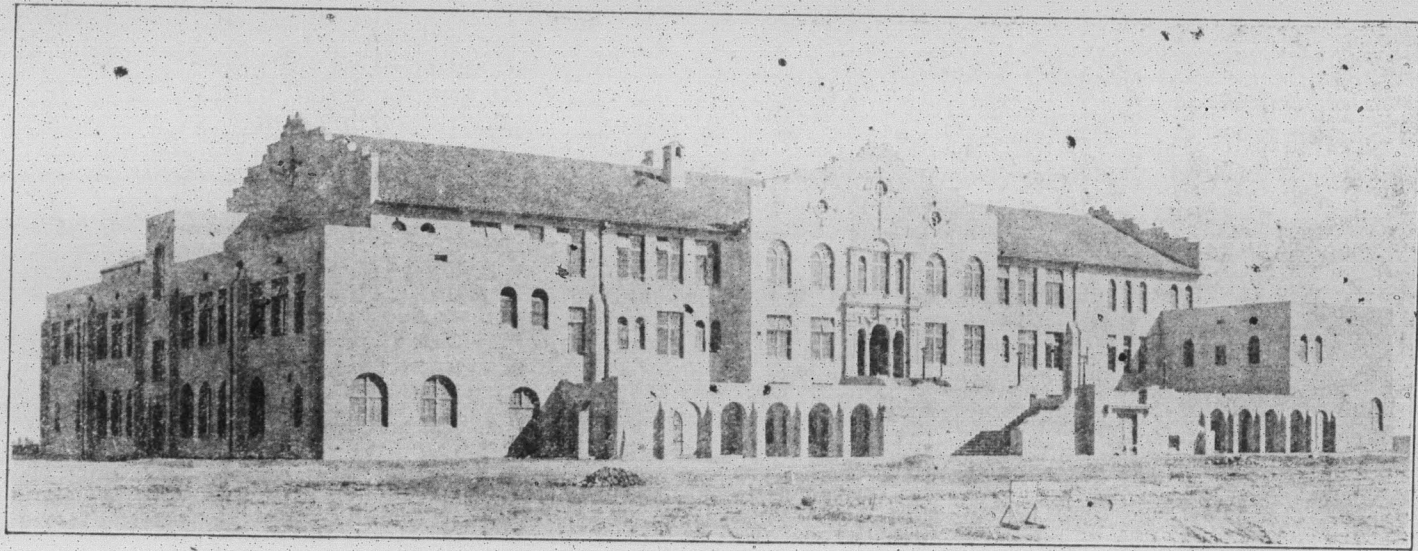

The finals in the roller polo series at Kickham's Mission Beach Roller Rink will be played next Tuesday night, when the Mission Beach Rink team will endeavor to nose out "The Beach News" team for the honors of first place. Manager Edw. A. Kickham has secured some splendid individual loving cups for presentation to the members of the victorious team in the finals. The Old Town team and the Thirtieth Destroyer Division team are also fighting the leaders for championship honors and the contest is proving a battle royal all 'round. The games are replete with thrills from start to finish and the contest next Tuesday night promises to be a humdinger. Don't miss it. Go early and you'll surely stay for the finish.

BUDD CARBERRY GETS

CHECK FROM MANAGER

EARLE FOR PRIZE RECIPE

In conformity with the announcement in these columns two weeks ago General Manager Earle of the Earle Products company at 5068 Niagara avenue, Ocean Beach, presented "Budd" Carberry with a check for five dollars as an award for first prize in the "Espanola" recipe contest for the month of May. Mr. Carberry is proprietor of the famous "Budd's Fish House" on the Ocean Beach board walk, and his victorious "Espanola" recipes included fritters, waffles and goulash made with "the relish of a thousand uses," manufactured by the Earle Products company. "Espanola" is sold by your neighborhood grocer. Just ask him about it. Prizes are regularly given in monthly recipe contests and Manager Earle invites the public to participate with recipes.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

By the terms of the common lease contract of sale under which most automobiles are sold, the seller retains title to the car until the installment payments are completed. When unpaid-for cars have been seized by prohibition agents, automobile dealers have recovered such cars under a provision of the National Prohibition Act as the innocent legal owners. United States Attorney George J. Hatfield, in a recent case before the federal District Court, showed that the driver of an automobile which was used for the illegal transportation of liquor had previously been offered against the prohibition law. The Court, in ruling on the application of the seller of the car, refused the claim on the ground that a reasonable investigation of the buyer would have disclosed his prior offenses, and that therefore the seller had not taken proper measures to insure that the car would not be used for an illegal purpose.

According to United States Attorney George J. Hatfield, President Coolidge's order granting authority to the United States prohibition enforcement administration to employ state, county, and municipal law officers as federal prohibition agents merely revokes an older government restriction against holding a state office while in federal employ. The President's order does not affect the provision of the California state constitution which declares the holder of a lucrative office under the United States to be ineligible to a civil office of profit under the state. It is doubtful if the dollar-a-year prohibition plan can be effected in this state unless the California courts rule that the proposed new office of federal prohibition agent is not a lucrative office.

On four Catholic priests of the diocese of Los Angeles and San Diego have been conferred high ecclesiastical rank by the Pope. The Rev. John Brady, V. F., pastor of St. Joseph's Church, San Diego, was given the rank of domestic prelate. The Rev. George Donahoe, pastor of Sacred Heart Parish, the Rev. John J. Clifford, pastor of Nativity Parish and the Rev. Francis J. Conaty, pastor of Immaculate Conception Parish, were the others named papal chamberlains. To the titles of the last three named will be prefixed "The Very Reverend." Rev. Brady's title henceforth will be Right Reverend Monsignor John Brady.

Eleven acres on the southerly limits of Lindsay, Tulare county, will be developed into a $100,000 industrial zone by the Southern Pacific company, it is announced at Lindsay. A gang of 100 men is busy laying three spur tracks through the center of the tract, and grading for 30,000 feet of macadam roadway is under way. It is rumored that two new packing houses are already planned for the new site, and that others are contemplated. The zone, while inside the city limits, is outside the fire limits, permitting of the erection of grape packing sheds.

At the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frank Abel, in Oakland, recently Mrs. Daniel Hamblin, of Yuba City, who is claimed to be the oldest early day settler of Sutter county living, celebrated with her four daughters the ninety-third anniversary of her birth. Mrs. Hamblin is the widow of Daniel Hamblin, who built one of the first dwellings to be built in Yuba City of bricks, brought around Cape Horn as ship ballast. All her old time friends were invited to join in the function at Oakland.

The State Board of Control accepted an offer to erect a building in Sacramento for the housing of the state division of motor vehicles, state highway department and other smaller departments. The building will be a 3-story fireproof structure with approximately 90,000 square feet of floor space to be leased to the state at 6-7 cents a square foot, this to include light, heat, water, janitor and elevator service. It will cost about $250,000.

The filing of articles of incorporation with the secretary of state in Sacramento of The Baptist Church of Red Bluff under the faith of the Regular Baptist Church of America is taken in Red Bluff as an indication of a permanent schism in the ranks of the membership over the doctrines expounded by Rev. J. Brooks Frost.

The appropriation bill signed by President Coolidge several days ago is expected to furnish a total of $256,640, or an increase of $3,926, for Yosemite National Park, according to word just received by Superintendent W. B. Lewis. The full appropriation will be available July 1.

Fifty-three years ago Bennett valley Grange at Santa Rosa, was organized and recently the anniversary was celebrated with the members of nine Granges present. The celebration was held in the grove near Santa Rosa where Grangers hall has stood for more than fifty years.

A memorial marker will be erected on the highway between Ione and Jackson, Amador county, to commemorate the spot where the last stage robbery was held on this route and the fatal shooting on that occasion of Michael Tovey, famous mail stage driver of those times.

The season's first concerted hegira of tourists to Yosemite arrived in the park recently. Several thousands of persons, taking advantage of the double holiday, trekked by rail and motor on their way to the valley. Hotel reservations were entirely taken for several days.

A two-room wing will be added to Oroville high school, at Oroville, at a cost of $6,980 immediately.

The California committee on the Regulation of Electricity to Agriculture held a conference at Santa Ana, June 7.

Fifteen summer rangers reported at Yosemite for duty on June 1, to augment the permanent force of ten rangers that patrol the park throughout the year.

Superintendent E. R. Green of the Gridley, Butte county, Libby, McNeil and Libby plant reports that the construction of the new addition to the cannery is nearly complete.

There are more Greeks in Butte county who seek citizenship to the United States than any other class of aliens. This is according to County Clerk C. F. Belding of Oroville.

Plans are being completed for a one-story frame and stucco gymnasium building for the Sunnyvale school district, to be erected at Sunnyvale, Santa Clara county. The building will cost about $30,000.

With telephones installed in every part of the building, the magnificent new $1,500,000 Sacramento Elks' home at Sacramento will have one of the most complete communication systems in northern California.

Nearly 2,000 Camp Fire Girls from all parts of the United States, including 500 executives, participated at Stockton, in the opening events of the eight-day seventh annual national convention of the organization.

A party of city officials from San Diego completed a survey a short time ago of constant angle arch dams constructed in the Oroville district with a view of erecting similar structures to create a water supply near San Diego.

Yosemite National Park will be flooded by delegates to various conventions to be held on the Pacific Coast this summer, according to a schedule of special parties announced by the Yosemite Valley Railroad company, at Merced.

The Watsonville office of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company is completing the installation of a new switchboard at Aptos, eleven miles north of Watsonville. The new switchboard will provide for 400 additional subscribers.

The National Congress of Parents and Teachers will hold its convention in Oakland in May, 1927. It was learned, following a decision made by the outgoing Board of the California Congress at the conclusion of its annual convention at San Bernardino.

A new community is developing about thirty miles west of Westmoreland on the Imperial Valley-Julian highway. Borego valley has been talked about for several years, but now at least a townsite has been surveyed and work on a hotel, store buildings, service station and dwellings is proceeding rapidly.

San Francisco, which was host a few years ago to the National Association of Real Estate Boards, is to again be the recipient of a visit from a group of distinguished realtors, when an excursion special sponsored by the Philadelphia Real Estate Board arrives here for a two-day stay June 21 and 22.

Dr. H. J. Webber, director of the Riverside Citrus Experiment Station, has returned from Berkeley, where he has been stationed for several months since his return from a year's leave of absence in South Africa. Dr. Webber will resume active directorship of the experiment station for the University of California at Riverside.

Indicative of the vast amount of building construction going on principally in southern California, building permits from fifty-six communities received recently aggregate $113,424,753 for the first five months of the year. The totals for May amount to $23,209,971 compared to $29,194,980 for the total May report of last year.

Equipped to test headlights, weigh an overloaded truck, issue license plates, explain the kinks of the motor vehicle laws to a perplexed farmer, or do anything else coming within the scope of the division of motor vehicle enforcement, the service truck of the division of motor vehicles left Sacramento recently for its first trip through northern California.

With the opening of the highways between California and Nevada the nine border stations covering the roads leading from alfalfa weevil infested districts have been re-opened and the camping equipment of all travelers entering this state will be inspected and thoroughly examined for evidences of alfalfa weevil and other injurious insect pests and plant diseases.

Famous cats and dogs of the films soon will be provided with a cemetery near Hollywood, where, with other pet animals of wealth and prominence, they may enjoy their last sleep amid surroundings in keeping with their station. Such a cemetery is the aim of the Pet Animal Memorial Association of Los Angeles, which filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state.

State Forest Rangers and fire warden will not be allowed to act as prohibition enforcement officers under the recent executive order of President Coolidge permitting the employment of state, county and municipal officers in that capacity of $1 a year. State Forester M. B. Pratt declared the forest service had its hands full protecting forests of the state and that no ranger or warden would be permitted to assume the added federal duties unless specifically ordered to do so by the Governor. This order, Pratt said, he did not expect to receive.

MY LANDSMAN

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I SENT my ships across the sea To find some fortune just for me; Yes, silks and satins I might wear, And jade and jewels for my hair; I sent my ships in search of gold, And ivory, and things of old; And then, when life was nearly past, My ships came sailing home at last, With empty hold.

Ah, now you think that long I wept, When not a ship with which I swept The seas of hope came sailing home From islands far across the foam. With silks and satins I might wear And jade and jewels for my hair? And yet, although for gold I yearned, When empty all my ships returned, I did not care.

For, while my ships were sailing far, I met a man—for men there are Upon the land as well as sea; And not a salty sailor he, But just a landsman here at home, Who never sailed across the foam, Nor jade nor jewels ever brought, Nor cared to roam.

And yet my landsman, strange to say, Although he never sailed away, Yes, just a landsman at a desk, Unsung, perhaps unpicturesque, Has brought my heart a greater store Than any ship from any shore Could ever bring—has brought me this: His arms around me, and his kiss, Forevermore.

Oh, maidens, you who, maybe sigh For golden ships as well as I, A ship's a most uncertain thing; Perhaps the fellow who will bring You love and laughter and delight And gems and jade forever bright Is just a fellow full of fun, Is just some fellow like the one Who calls tonight.

THE WHY OF SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

WASHING TOGETHER

IF TWO persons wash their hands at the same time it is a sign that they will be friends forever. Or, as they say, "Wash and wipe together; live in peace forever." When Henry VIII wished to show to his courtiers the friendly terms upon which he and Cardinal Wolsey stood, he caused the cardinal to wash his hands with him in the golden basin which was presented his majesty for purposes of ablation after dinner. Seeing the king and his great chancellor washing their hands at the same time in the same basin convinced the courtiers that the rumor of their falling out was all "bosh," and that the king and cardinal would be friends forever.

The charm did not work in the case of Henry and Wolsey, but the ceremony spoken of was a very ancient one, indicating a lasting friendship between kings and those whom they honored, or with whom they were binding a treaty. The intimacy of the act and the ostentatious manner in which it was frequently performed doubtless had a great deal to do with impressing upon the populace its significance of lasting friendship and in making it the immediate ancestor of the popular superstition of today.

But back of that lies the mystic qualities attributed to water by primitive man as an ultimate source of the generation of life, and the veneration in which the hand was held as a distinctive mark of man's superiority over the brute and as the agent of his intellectual processes. Two men washing their hands together in the same water generated a similarity of life in thought and action which produced a lasting friendship.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

THE CHANGING TIMES

THAT which was thought to be good and of inestimable value only yesterday, is frequently found unworthy of acceptance today.

In the changing times, today is apt to prove in some particular that yesterday was a blockhead.

Not however in the things whose fundamentals were based on righteousness, but in matters and substances which would not stand the wear and tear of application.

Yesterday is but a reminiscence, much like a blandishing billet-doux, carefully tied with ribbon and laid away to fade and mellow in an oft forgotten hiding place.

In most cases it takes only a light wind to blow us from our anchorage of yesterday and carry us a little farther down stream.

The golden sunlight of today, the colorful flowers, the song birds, and possibly new acquaintances, change the whole trend of our life, unfolding like the blooms under new conditions.

Nor are we the same beings we were yesterday.

Being influenced by present material surroundings, rather than by the Voice of Nature, the great things we had planned to do only twenty-four hours ago, in some way or another do not quite harmonize with the times.

For reasons which we are unable to explain, they seem just a little bit old-fashioned and slightly faded.

The modern cults, the strange lights and the scoffers weaken our resolutions and hold us back.

We wonder whether it was so always; whether our father and mother had similar experiences, or whether they were possessed of stronger wills which enabled them to overcome the yesterdays and face the todays resolutely and move along toward the goal until they arrived safe within its borders.

The difference between us and our parents is not difficult to explain.

They clung through trials and difficulties to the faith of old, while we under the spell of the changing times, defiantly disregard divine teachings and depend entirely on the frail strength of our own, seldom thinking of lifting our faces to the glorious heavens or asking for needed support and guidance.

AN ABBREVIATED STORY

PRINCE OF OPTIMISTS

THE Optimist club was sitting around the camp fire. The ruddy glow of the flames lit up their rubicund faces, and ever and anon their jolly, outbursts of laughter would awaken the echoes in the woods about them.

The question came up—which of all their long line of presidents had been the greatest optimist? A vote was taken.

Loffenby Serious was our most optimistic president," spoke up Grinnen Giggie. "He was so optimistic that he used to try to catch trains by the time on his wrist watch."

"I nominate Million W. Smiles," cried Reliable Buoyant. "Million W. Smiles was so optimistic that he married a poor widow with six small children and a goat on a salary of $24 a week."

"I nominate Silver D. Lining," said Freely Guffaw. "Silver D. Lining, our present respected president, is so optimistic that he has been arrested for counterfeiting Russian money."

With great enthusiasm the club voted for Silver D. Lining.

SUNDRIES

A SMALL amount of meat which has been left from a previous meal will, with a combination of vegetables, make a most wholesome main dish.

Chop Suey.

Cut into half-inch cubes any leftover cooked beefsteak, add a half cupful of cut-up onion to every cupful of meat and cover with water, simmer slowly for half an hour, then add two to three cupfuls of celery cut into small pieces, continue cooking, adding seasoning and simmer for another half hour or more. Add two tablespoonfuls of chop suey sauce and serve in a mound surrounded by hot, well-cooked rice. Fresh round steak may be used for this dish, frying brown, adding the onion and letting it fry before adding water.

Chili Stew.

Take one and one-half rounds of steak, put through the meat grinder. Heat one and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter and the same of olive oil, add six tablespoonfuls of chopped onion, four cloves of garlic and fry until a light brown. Add one and one-half tablespoonfuls of Worcestershire sauce and three teaspoonfuls of chili powder, mixing well. Place the meat in a deep frying pan and almost cover with water, cook for fifteen minutes slowly, then add three cupfuls of canned tomatoes and two teaspoonfuls of salt. Blend one and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour with a little of the tomato juice and add to the stew. Bake in a casserole one hour and serve with boiled rice or noodles.

Creole Chicken.

This dish may be prepared the day before and reheated for serving. Cut up a good fowl, cover with boiling water and cook five minutes, then simmer in a fireless cooker or on the back of the range for half an hour. Cook two cupfuls of canned tomatoes and half a bay leaf for fifteen minutes, then strain. Chop one small onion and cook in three slices of bacon diced, until the onion is yellow, cook the bacon until brown before adding the onion, add the chicken, tomato, a tablespoonful of chopped parsley, two red and two green peppers cut fine, and two teaspoonfuls of salt. Boil five minutes, return to the cooker and cook until the fowl is tender. When ready to serve thicken the sauce with flour and serve very hot.

Broiled Mushrooms.

The delicious field mushroom, after brushing well and removing the caps, should be placed hollow-side up on a broiler, add a teaspoonful of butter to each cap and broil under gas. Usually if large it is best to cook them on the other side first, then turn over, and butter and finish cooking. Chop the stems and fry in butter.

Turkish Women Dancers

The Turkish national dance, the Zebek, has been reformed to include women participants. This wildly vivacious peasant dance has been performed for centuries by men only, the forms differing in different parts of the country.

The creation of one form from the many dance variations as well as the introduction of women dancers, have been effected by Selim Sirri Bey. He has studied folk-dancing throughout Europe. His two daughters are accompanying him on his tour of lectures throughout Turkey and are demonstrating the newly reformed Zebek. They are the first Turkish girls to take up dancing professionally.

ARTICLE NO. II

I FIRMLY believe that promoters and high-pressure salesmen are becoming more and more crafty. Shrewder ways are being resorted to in order to trap the novice investor. It is deplorable that the investor does not profit by experience and is victimized a second time in his endeavor to recover that which he has already lost. It is the old, old story of trying to recover, but in the attempt losing. This very hour thousands of hard-earned dollars have slipped from the grasp of the calloused hands that earned them into the clutches of unscrupulous skin-game artists. Tomorrow the scenes of today will be re-enacted with a new and larger list of victims. A month from today depositors will still be pouring an ever increasing volume of their savings into the hopper of unwise investments. A year from today the same tragedy will be re-enacted unless our savings bankers come to the rescue and help to stop this nefarious business of defrauding and swindling our savers of the fruits of their labors.

Here is a typical case. A group of men undertook to promote a vending or self-serving machine. Their plan called for the sale of $37,000,000 worth of leases in the United States. Similar projects previously started throughout the United States had failed. As a matter of fact, the average daily sale of one of these self-service machines was only $3.10, which in itself made it impossible for a machine to produce sufficient revenue to make it profitable. Servicing the machines was another obstacle which had not been successfully overcome. In three months the promoters were successful in selling over $2,500,000 worth of rights to use these machines.

$40,000 in Savings Lost by One Man
I know of one man who withdrew $40,000 from a savings bank and invested it in this promotion. He told me it represented the accumulations of a lifetime. "And now I have lost it all," he said in a trembling voice. "I haven't a cent left and I am past sixty years of age—too old to work!" he added.

Of the more than $2,500,000 invested by savers, over $1,000,000 was taken by these wily promoters as commission. Think of making a commission of over $1,000,000 on $2,500,000 of sales in about three months' time! Think of what this more than $1,000,000 of commission represents—think of the struggles and the sacrifices of the men and women who saved it! With some it was saved penny by penny over a period of years. Think of the sorrow it caused, the heartaches, the misery and the disappointment which followed in the wake of the collapse of this promotion. Think of the old man who lost $40,000—all he had been able to save during his lifetime. Think of the widow's mite, for she lost it also. All that is left today of the original investment is less than 10 cents on every dollar.

Here is an endless chain scheme which relieved working girls of a portion of their savings. The loss ran into many thousands of dollars. The scheme is to sell silk hose to girls by getting them to act as selling agents.

A hosiery company rents offices in the shopping district. Soon an attractive offer is made through the local newspapers by cleverly worded advertisements in which it would appear that any young lady can secure five pairs of hose worth $2 a pair for only $1. In other words, $10 worth of silk stockings for only $1! Without stopping to analyze the proposition or to consider how impossible it is for any concern to stay in business and sell $10 worth of silk hose for $1, thousands of young women instantly fall for the scheme.

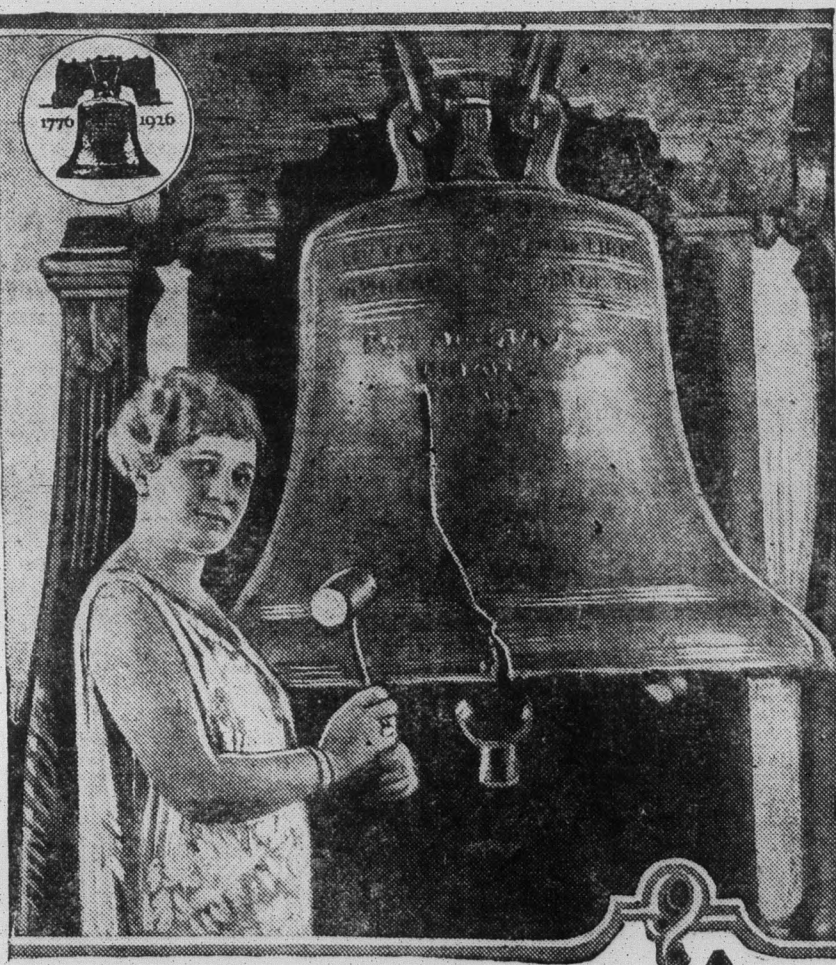

How Endless Chain Catches Victims
Here is how it catches its victims. Each victim pays $4 and receives three one dollar coupons which she must sell to her friends, and the friends must come in and pay down $4 each, get three coupons each which they must sell to three friends and then these friends must perpetuate the scheme by selling coupons to their friends and so on indefinitely.

Here is where the promoters make a clean-up. One of the conditions which must be met before the young woman who purchased the first coupon receives her $10 worth of hose for $1 is that all three to whom she sold her three coupons must come in, pay down $4 each for three more coupons and then go out and sell them. Before the three have done this, one or perhaps all three get "cold feet" on the proposition and, rather than go out and "soak" three of their friends $1 each, they simply give up the job and charge their loss to experience. But in doing so they also block the girl who purchased the first coupon from completing her contract, and of course she, too, loses the money she invested in the scheme.

At a glance the loss appears to be small, but the truth is the scheme is capable of such great expansion that it soon takes in hundreds and thousands of victims. This is but one of many endless chain schemes in use today in the United States.

(Article III will deal with land schemes and loan shark plans for robbing people of their savings.)

MAKE NIGHT DRIVING SAFER

A new type automobile headlight, radically different from any now in use, which will give a long range without glare and illuminate the ditches along the side of the road by a wide side beam, has been developed by the General Electric laboratory after three years of experimenting. With upwards of 20,000 people killed each year and hundreds of thousands injured in automobile accidents, many of them occurring at night, any invention which tends to remove hazards from night driving, is a public benefaction. A safe automobile headlight is as much of a public necessity today as are suitable electric lights for the home.

FEATURES FOR NEXT

WEEK INCLUDE "CALIFORNIA STRAIGHT AHEAD"

On this Saturday a screamingly funny comedy drama "California Straight Ahead" will be shown with Reginald Denny the Emperor of Comedy, in the leading role. It's a rubber tired riot of rollicking romance and racing cars. Gertrude Olmstead is the girl, and Tom Wilson and Charles Gerrard appear in the supporting cast.

On Sunday and Monday, John Bowers comes to the Granada screen in "Rocking Moon," a story of the north country and one of the season's most unique romantic melodramas filmed in the wild portion of Alaska, where the story's action takes place. A News, a comedy and a Kelly color will also be shown.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, "Stella Maris," which features Mary Philbin, the Merry-go-round girl, will be shown. Elliot Dexter and Gladys Brockwell appear in support of the star. Marie in "Fighting Hearts" and a Fable will also be shown.

The surprise picture of the year, Renaud Hoffman's "The Unknown Soldier" will be shown on Thursday and Friday, July 1 and 2. The Granada is showing this picture in co-operation with the local Post of the American Legion, who have endorsed the picture as a photoplay vastly superior to the ordinary so-called war picture. On the same program, the Granada is offering a comedy and a News reel.

RADIO

George W. Vinal, Government Authority on Batteries, in His Laboratory at the United States Bureau of Standards, at Washington.

When a radio receiver fails to give its customary volume the "B" batteries are almost invariably blamed. It is true that they are sometimes the cause of this trouble but it is advisable to measure their voltage before arriving at this conclusion. A good make of "B" battery of adequate size should last, even with a receiver consuming heavy "B" battery current, for at least six months and if it is a moderately economical receiver, from nine to twelve months, provided it is given the average use of about two hours per day. Failure to give such life is an indication, either that it is a battery of inferior make, or of inadequate capacity for the set used or that there is a defect in the receiver.

Causes of Short Battery Life.

Briefly, the factors most frequently causing short "B" battery life are:

1. Audio-frequency amplifier not equipped with "C" battery.
2. "C" battery exhausted.
3. Excessive plate voltage.

4. Tubes draw excessive current because of accidental displacement of grid and plate.

5. "B" battery of insufficient capacity for the drain placed upon it. This last cause is frequently overlooked because the first cost of large batteries is somewhat more than that of small ones. But it is indeed a wasteful practice to use a battery of inadequate capacity; this is apparent if the cost is figured in cent per hour of use, rather than in first cost. On the face of it, certainly it seems more expensive to pay about 25 per cent more for a heavy duty "B" battery, but the economy is apparent when the heavy duty lasts twice as long in service as the "large" size battery. The savings are even greater when heavy duty "B" batteries are substituted for the small portable size batteries which are sometimes erroneously used for home receivers.

There have been cases when "B" battery maintenance cost has been reduced from 12 cents an hour to 2 cents an hour by using a heavy duty or extra large "B" battery in preference to one of the portable sizes. It frequently happens that receiving set owners replace their "B" batteries when volume falls. The slightly increased volume which new "B" batteries give may lead to the conclusion that an exhausted "B" battery was the cause of the reduced volume. A "B" battery voltmeter, however, might show only a normal fall in voltage which would not account for the reduction in volume.

In such cases it is advisable to inspect the antenna connections for a broken or corroded lead-in, loose ground connection, worn out "C" battery or lost magnetization of loud speaker unit. Still another cause of reduced volume is the loss of active material on the tube filaments. Quoting from the Technical News Bulletin, issued by the national bureau of standards:

Tubes Lose Sensitivity.

"Electron tubes in radio receiving sets eventually lose their sensitivity. This sometimes progresses to the point where the receiving set operates very poorly or not at all, even though the tube filament is not burned out. The user of the set frequently confuses this condition with that due to an exhausted "B" battery. If the tubes are of the thoriated tungsten (X-L) filament type, they can usually be rejuvenated to serve as well as new tubes in the receiving set."

A simple process of rejuvenation, which can be performed at home, consists in disconnecting the "B" battery from the set and burning the filaments at full brilliance for a half hour. Usually this restores the filaments to full activity.

The two major causes of reduced volume are exhausted "B" batteries and worn-out tube filaments. It is easy to determine which is responsible for the loss of volume. A good, reliable voltmeter will indicate the condition of the "B" batteries. If each 45-volt "B" battery registers 34 volts or more, the cause of reduced volume lies elsewhere, probably with the tubes. Lacking a reliable voltmeter to test "B" batteries, a good plan is to have on hand one or two spare tubes which are known to be in good condition. Substitute the new tubes for those in the set and if this makes a marked improvement in volume, it is an indication that the old tubes require reactivation or renewal.

By-Pass Condensers an Aid to Radio Receiver

There are a number of places in a receiver where by-pass condensers should be used to help improve its operation. By-pass or blocking condensers keep the radio frequency currents in the part of the circuit where they belong. If the radio frequency or high frequency current strays into the audio frequency or low frequency part of the circuit, you will get howls and noises and generally poor performance from your set. In fact, if very much radio frequency gets through to the audio you may not be able to operate the receiver at all.

By-pass condensers should be used across any part that has a high resistance or impedance to provide an easy path for the radio frequency current. A by-pass condenser should always be provided across the "A" and "B" batteries. When the batteries are new the resistance is not extremely high, but after they have been in use for some time this resistance rises rapidly and some means must be provided to counteract this effect. A fairly large capacity must be used from one-half to two mfd. The larger the better. Connect the condenser between the 45-volt plus and the negative filament and between the 90-volt plus and the negative filament. Even with a new battery these condensers will improve reception, but their effect will be particularly noticeable with batteries that have been used a short time.

Use good quality condensers and make sure they are not leaking. To test for leakage connect a 90-volt battery across the condenser for a few seconds, then, after setting aside for about 15 minutes, touch the condenser contacts with a pair of phone tips. If there is no click heard in phones then the condenser is leaking. If, however, you hear a click, it is O. K.

The next place a blocking condenser should be tried is across the primaries of the audio transformers. Very often a small amount of radio frequency current will get through from the detector and will pass through the primary of the transformer unless an easier path is provided for it. A condenser of from .0025 to .01 should be used. The best value will be found by trying various capacities.

R. F. Amplification to Give Volume and Tone

Radio frequency amplification is accomplished by the use of additional transformers preceding the detector. This will amplify the radio frequency signals to a value great enough to faithfully actuate the detector, thereby giving greater volume and clarity in the audio amplifier. Two stages of radio frequency amplification will generally be found to be sufficient and in very carefully designed receivers, even one stage will be found to be enough.

Rundown "B" Batteries Should Be Replaced

Even though enough plate voltage is available to supply the receiver, good results will not be obtained if an overdischarged B battery is in the circuit. Standard 22½-volt "B" batteries that do not register more than 17 volts, and 45-volt batteries that do not register more than 34 volts may be considered inefficient and should be replaced. If left in the circuit they are apt to cause noises to be heard in the set.

Improved Variable Condenser

New variable condensers are arranged in a brass housing that protects the plates from injury, keeps dust and dirt out and at the same time shields the condenser from body capacity and from magnetic spraying of other nearby instruments.

THE SURPRISE VISIT

By JANE O'RYAN

(© 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

BERT was asleep, and he needed sleep desperately. As Beatrice turned to leave she noticed that the window shade was not drawn, so tiptoed to the window and with infinite care began to draw the shade down.

Suddenly, without any warning, it rebelled and jerked the cord from her hand, and doubtless to show its preference for a high place in life, flew to the top of the window, with a rattle that made Beatrice cry out in protest and turn alarmed eyes to Bert, who awoke with a start and half sat up.

"What in thunder was that?" he cried in pain.

"I'm so sorry," wailed Beatrice, "but I thought the light might annoy you and—"

"If I can only get a little sleep," groaned Bert, "I'll be all right and ready for my day's work tomorrow. Much depends upon my feeling fit."

"Now, now," Beatrice protested, "don't criticize yourself again. Suppose you did get angry with your boss—every one knows Mr. Wolford upsets people, and if he is going to refuse to give you an increase because you lost your temper, when you do such heaps of work—"

Her voice became unsteady.

Bert kissed her tenderly. "We need that increase tremendously, darling." They had married on love and high optimism.

Gently Beatrice pressed her husband back against the pillow. "You're to sleep, dearest," she commanded.

He nodded, then murmured with infinite feeling, "Oh, for a steak, a lovely, juicy, expensive steak."

"And vegetables of all descriptions," whispered Beatrice. Then sprang to her feet and ran swiftly to the door.

As it closed after her Bert sighed. It was hard on Beatrice—four months of slim pickings. Of course they did not intend to complain; but it was strange that Aunt Amanda, who seemed to be fond of Beatrice, acted so indifferent. She had returned from Europe three weeks ago and had not even let them know where she was staying. He shrugged, mentally. They could get on without her help; and as he sank blissfully into sleep, her help became of less and less importance, then, of no importance—then, with an imperativeness that dragged Bert back from the blissful depths, the dog next door barked.

Bert sprang from the bed, dashed to the window, opened it with a crash and leaned out. There was the abomination in the courtyard, having a wonderful time bounding about in sheer joy over nothing.

"Spike" was the name bestowed upon this foolish pup by his small owner; but Bert had given him one he thought far more appropriate, and which the dog evidently recognized as justified, for he always promptly obeyed, as he did now, when Bert called—"Hi, there, Gomer!"

The dog looked up inquiringly and wagged his stubby tail. Bert threw him a bone from an array he kept upon the window ledge. The dog sprang to it and Bert returned to bed.

Once again he was sinking into the all-satisfying depths of slumber, when from the courtyard came a voice that drew him forth and laid bare his ear to brazen-throated notes, accompanied on a harsh and untuned piano. "Let me die for thee," the singer pleaded.

"You bet I will," cried Bert, springing to his feet and striding to the window. Cautiously, he looked out, then picked up a pebble from the sill, inserted it in the sling of a handy bean-shooter, aimed—

"Till die," the singer insisted.

Bert let go and the little concert came to an abrupt end.

After a dazed look about, with his hand on his assaulted chest, the singer departed; so did Bert, for his bed, upon which he dropped and curled up like a leaf of autumn.

Then the door opened cautiously and Beatrice's nose and one eye appeared in the crevice.

"Are you awake, dear?" she whispered.

"No, I'm dead," Bert groaned, "and I want to stay dead."

The door opened violently, bringing Beatrice's startled face to view; then with a rush forward, she cried, "Oh, don't talk that way; did you hear the dog bark and the man sing?"

He nodded, grimly.

"Well," Beatrice pleaded, "try to sleep now."

It seemed as though he were willing to do so; but at that moment the irrepressible Gomer, fearful, no doubt, that any one might think he had changed his mind about the joy of living, cast aside the unyielding bond, and began to give hilarious demonstration of his conviction. Bert sprang to his feet, as he gritted his teeth.

On Monday he started for business in a jaded condition. The work was continuous; but he kept his temper, lured by the magic of the word, "raise." He was certain of success, for Mr. Wolford had become more than appreciative; he was actually chummy, and there was every reason to believe that Saturday would bring the reward.

So on Friday evening Beatrice and he planned the celebration dinner—steak, all the vegetables in and out of cans, a simple salad and, for dessert, ice cream and coffee, of course.

Saturday evening Bert climbed the one flight of stairs to his apartment. There stood Gomer, ears cocked and eyes fixed longingly on the closed door of his own apartment, just across the narrow hall from that of Bert's; but there was no sign of recognition from the preoccupied man. As he opened the door of his apartment, Beatrice ran toward him with outstretched arms.

The door was forgotten and the hungry Gomer saw his opportunity. With a quick bound he entered, even as Beatrice was folded in the arms of her husband.

"Well," she cried, breathlessly, "how much is it?"

Bert made himself smile. "That's the dessert," he exclaimed.

"Oh," cried Beatrice, "it must be larger than you thought; well—"

Her laugh was replete with joy. "And I have the most wonderful steak and it cost more than we expected, too—and the vegetables and all, and the table looks lovely."

"So do you," said Bert. He seemed excited. "Let's cook the steak together."

There was a pleasant hissing and bubbling sound from the stove as they entered the kitchen. Beatrice put a dainty apron on over her simple frock and Bert tied the strings.

"Get the steak from the refrigerator," said Beatrice, as she lifted a cover from a saucepan; then she turned in alarm, for there was a scuffling sound and a suppressed oath from Bert. "Confound that dog under my feet. How did he get in here, any way?"

"I don't know," exclaimed Beatrice in amazement, as her eyes followed the rapidly disappearing Gomer; "perhaps he came in with you."

"With me," cried Bert, indignantly, turning from the refrigerator with the steak. And at that moment, Gomer reappeared in the doorway with an undoubted "yes, with you," expression in the whole aspect of him.

"Get out," thundered Bert, and before he, or Beatrice, or the dog realized, he had hurled the steak at him. It landed full against the dog and sent him sprawling upon the floor; but he was upon his feet in an instant and began to test the value of the meat with his young, sharp teeth.

Bert stared, stupefied by his own act, while Beatrice gazed at her cherished steak as though she did not know just how she could be expected to go on without its support. "How could you, Bert," she wailed.

He turned his dazed eyes to hers and something in them made her run to him. "Oh, well," she said with a shrug, "we can get another one." But he made no response to her smile. "Bert," she cried, "you didn't get that increase."

He nodded. "The firm couldn't afford it, Mr. Wolford explained." He turned aside and his eyes encountered Gomer in beatific enjoyment of their sacred steak. He took a wrathful step toward him; but the dog was not to be overtaken so easily. Firmly implanting his teeth in his dinner, he dragged it off with him in his stampede to the door and down the stairs.

Bert ran out and leaned over the balustrade. The dog had disappeared, but what he saw made him gasp. "Aunt Amanda!" he exclaimed. Ye gods, and she was so particular and strict. However, she was made beautifully welcome and dinner was served.

How many vegetables she ate! Poor lady, that was all there was! She did most of the talking, and Beatrice and Bert managed to smile and laugh correctly. When the meal was over and they were seated in the tiny living room, Beatrice suddenly remembered the dessert. Oh, well, nothing mattered.

Aunt Amanda laughed. "I like to drop in unexpectedly; surprised my nephew and his wife last week; such extravagances." She raised her eyes in protest; then opened her bag and drew out two checks, each for five hundred dollars, and gave one to Beatrice and one to Bert. "A well-ordered, economical meal," she announced, "and you listen to an older and wiser person talk. I like young people with common sense."

Then, as though sensing that there was some glory being appropriated that was his property, Gomer appeared in the doorway, and with a joyous bark dashed into the room.

"What a nice little dog," said Aunt Amanda. "What's his name?"

"Spike," replied Bert, as he leaned forward and patted Gomer's head. "Great little fellow."

Obedience

You are seeking your own will, my daughter. You are seeking some good other than the law you are bound to obey. But how will you find good? It is not a thing of choice; it is a river that flows from the foot of the Invisible Throne, and flows by the path of obedience. I say again, man cannot choose his duties. You may choose to forsake your duties, and choose not to have the sorrow they bring. But you will go forth; and what will you find, my daughter? Sorrow without duty—bitter herbs, and no bread with them.—From "Romola," by George Eliot.

His playmate, George, went over to Robbie's house early one morning to see if he could come out, but his mother said: "He isn't awake yet."

Whereupon George asked: "Can his velocipede come out?"

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

RED LYNX

"I have two other names which I can use just as well if I want to use them," said the Red Lynx in the zoo.

"The first name I can use is the one I am using now."

"That is the name of Red Lynx."

"Then, too, I am sometimes known as the Bay Lynx, so I could use that name."

"I am also known as the Wildcat, so I could use that name as well."

"Almost any of these names will do, but it is my nature of which I wish to tell you, not of the name I am choosing to use."

"Or rather that isn't so important. I throw in that extra bit of information for good measure," as it were.

"Yes, I want to tell you about my nature and my ways."

"I am wild, I am as wild as can be. In fact I don't think you could find an animal much more dangerous than I am when I choose to be dangerous."

"Have you ever seen a cat's eyes shine out in the dark?"

"Well, they look all right and are all right, because they belong to a tame cat, but can you imagine what they would look like if they looked wild?"

"Well, that is what my eyes look like—wild and angry and as though there was nothing I would not do and could not do that was wild, if I wished to do it and felt in the mood for doing it."

"That's the sort of a creature to be, I say."

"Dangerous if necessary, and also dangerous if one wants to be dangerous."

"I'm small. I come from this country, this land of America."

"Sometimes I am nice."

"But I am not boasting of my nice times, for it seems to me anyone, or almost anyone could boast of being nice."

"I'm boasting of the times when I was free and when I frightened people."

"That's what I am boasting of, I, the Bay Lynx, the Red Lynx, the Wildcat."

But the other animals in the zoo grinned and looked at each other and said:

"People usually boast of their good points and of the good deeds they have done, but it takes the Wildcat to boast of the wild things he has done and of his bad qualities."

And the Wildcat, or Bay Lynx, or Red Lynx twisted his whiskers and said:

"I'm myself. That is what I am."

But the Tiger in the Lion house did not like the news. Billie Brownie brought him of the Red Lynx.

"They shouldn't boast too much," said the Tiger.

"Remember I am a greater hunter than the lion who is known as the King of the Beasts."

"Yes, I am a greater hunter when I am free."

"I am wilder than he is, too."

"He is too fond of roaring and boasting when he is free, just as he does here."

"He loves that great voice of his, but I'm the clever, crafty tiger, I am."

"King Lion knows it is true, so he is not saying anything just now."

"But go and tell the Red Lynx that Tiger sends his compliments and says to 'go easy' on the boasting—that he has to remember the tiger who is wilder than the King of the Beasts."

SHOULD HUSBANDS DO HOUSE WORK?

How Mrs. Dyer Solved the Problem.

Mrs. Mildred Dyer was lucky. She had a good-natured husband who helped her with much of her housework. Because she was in ill health for years, it was often necessary for him to do this. But it bothered Mrs. Dyer. She felt that he had to work hard enough anyway. The time he spent in doing her work was needed for his own. She determined to find the road to better health.

She writes: "I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is simply wonderful. My health is better than it has ever been. I am getting stronger and gaining in weight."

She has solved her problem and her household is happier. The Dyers live at Redlands, Calif., Route A, Box 183. How often does your husband have to do your housework? No matter how willing he is, no woman feels comfortable about it. Perhaps you, too, will find better health through the faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

WASHING BLANKETS AND STORING THEM

Napping a Blanket to Make It Fluffier.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In the latter part of June, when less bedding is required, most housekeepers begin to think about washing the blankets and putting the heavier ones away for next winter. You will want to store these blankets in fresh spotless condition, not only because it makes it so much easier and pleasanter in the fall when they are again put into use, but because experience has shown that moths do not attack clean woolen articles as readily as those that are soiled. So the chances of complete protection from moths are better if you wash the blankets now.

Choose a bright, moderately warm, breezy day each time you plan to wash blankets—for in a large household they will most likely be done a few at a time and you will then be sure that they will dry quickly and evenly. The warmth of the blanket depends very largely upon the amount of nap. When the blankets are thoroughly dry you can raise the nap by brushing them well with a clean stiff whisk broom. Hand cards, such as are used for combing wool, are even better for the purpose. There is some loss of wool in napping a blanket, but the result is a fluffier, consequently warmer, blanket.

Store in Cedar Chest.

After they have been washed, the best place to store heavy winter blankets over the summer is in a cedar chest. Any tight box or container, however, may be used if you scatter moth balls or naphthalene flakes through the folds, or the blankets may be securely wrapped in

PERFECT RECIPE FOR ANGEL FOOD

Cake Requires Considerable Number of Eggs.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Angel food requires a good many egg whites but is not extravagant at this season. The ingredients are: 1 cupful of soft wheat flour, 1 cupful of egg whites (the whites of 8 fairly large eggs), 1 to 1½ cupfuls of sugar, ½ teaspoonful of salt, 1 teaspoonful vanilla or lemon flavoring, 1 teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Angel food is mixed in a slightly different way than plain sponge cake, says the United States Department of Agriculture. The sugar, flour and half the salt are sifted together several times. The egg whites are beaten with the other half of the salt until they are frothy; then the cream of tartar is added and they are beaten until stiff. The dry ingredients are then folded carefully into the beaten egg whites, and when the mixture is partly blended the flavoring is added. Only the folding motion should be used in mixing, for stirring tends to release the air depended on for leavening.

WAISTLINE AGAIN APPEARS; SCARF ADDS THE CHIC TOUCH

NOW comes midsummer, bringing in the daintiest and loveliest gowns of the year. They are a gay and graceful company, revealing the climax of summer styles, developed in the different sorts of sheer or crisp fabrics and going to extremes of the mode. Bodices molded to the figure, wider skirt effects, belts snugly fitted and the bloused silhouette, all point in one direction—and toward the reappearance of a real waistline. It has long been practically absent from our midst, but the mode is playing hide and seek with it and, in some of the new summer frocks, it emerges and comes into plain view.

Plain and figured georgette, chiffon, voile and taffeta, all of them combined with various laces, lend the procession of colorful materials favored for afternoon and evening gowns. Crepe de chine is important and, among the latest arrivals there are some charming organdies, with slender bodices and very bouffant skirt. These in flower-like colors are particularly pretty, posed over lace foundations and a fichu of organdie, finished at the waistline with a prim bow of it, has a quaint flavor—suited to the fabric and style of the frock. Most taffeta gowns affect the snug bodice and the bouffant skirt and many of them have a deep border at the hemline, made of georgette or other transparent fabric. Ruffles, gathers and plaits are all employed to provide fullness in skirts, or it may be accomplished by circular flounces, as in the graceful frock shown here. This pretty version of midseason modes is made of georgette, with very full skirt, moderately snug bodice and

Worn with tailored clothes, scarfs are called upon to introduce contrasting and sometimes vivid colors into costumes that are usually dark or neutral, and the pretty fashion of matching the color of the scarf in the hat facing and trimming continues to flourish. Small scarfs of bias chiffon, tied at one side with a standing loop, are popular, and often the entire hat is of the same color as the scarf. Longer scarfs of crepe cut on the straight are wound about the throat and looped over at the front, as shown in the figure at the right of the picture. But the manner of wearing or tying the scarf is something for the individual to decide upon and there are ingenious variations to experiment with.

For afternoon printed and plain crepes afford means for endless variations of the scarf—which may be made the most conspicuous part of the costume. There is a fad for batik decorations on chiffon and crepe de chine, so that anyone who wants to take the time may have an individual scarf made for herself and by herself. The printed crepes, chosen in becoming colors and bordered with an indicated waistline that is little lower than normal.

Black and pink combinations are among the foremost new style features and black lace or chiffon, posed over pink or flesh color, is an outstanding success in afternoon and dinner gowns—which also serve for summer evening affairs.

The scarf's the thing with which we are to achieve "chic" this spring. If we know how to make the most of our fleeting and floating opportunities. Beginning as a mere wisp of gay chiffon or crepe, perhaps 12 inches wide, the scarf progresses through the ranks of tailored suits and frocks, growing larger and bolder all the time. In the company of afternoon gowns it reaches generous dimensions and finishes its career as a shawl with evening dresses—or may go to that extreme of size.

plain crepe or picoté at the edges, make lovely additions to the afternoon frock and are the most graceful of all accessories. The scarf at the left of the picture is a popular model.

In the realm of evening dress, scarfs may become spectacular. Here striking color combinations and large shawl-scarfs give them the importance of the embroidered shawls which have enjoyed such a long vogue. Pink or other high colors are chosen for scarfs made of chiffon or brocade and finished with wide borders of black chiffon. But these very large scarfs are few compared to the number of smaller scarfs for evening wear. Simple, and as pretty as any, are scarfs of bias chiffon, picoté at the edge. They are wrapped about the neck and float over the shoulders.

SILVER FOXES BRED FOR FUR

High on the slopes of snow-capped mountains of California an ideal location has been found for the breeding of silver foxes, an industry which is thriving as a lucrative pursuit and fast gaining recognition as a national resource. In California, despite the fact that fur raising is usually associated with the bleak pine fringed wilds of the north, there are now dozens of fox ranches established and others being built.

ENTERTAINMENT BY

TEXAS STATE SOCIETY

The Texas State Society met last Monday night, and perfected plans for its July entertainments, with Capt. J. D. Dickson, President of Society in the Chair. On Friday night, July 9th, in Harmonial Hall in the downstairs auditorium, the Society will "put on" under the direction of Mrs. Anabelle Morse, an entertainment of music, songs, readings and fancy dancing. The "Spirit of the Alamo," a typical Texas song, will be sung by Pro. Cal. Cohen of Houston, Texas, who wrote the song, and set it to music. J. W. Barbee, past-president, and Dr. Walker, present president of the Texas Society of Long Beach will be present and will speak. A general dance upstairs in the regular dance hall will close the entertainment.

CITY COUNCIL ORDERS

FREIGHT CARS REMOVED

Because property owners were complaining, the city council last Monday instructed the city manager to cause the removal of freight cars from the tracks of the San Diego Electric Railway on Santa Cruz avenue, near DeFoe street. It was explained by the company that the cars are loaded with cement to be used in paving at Sunset Cliffs and that they will be removed as soon as they are unloaded. However, the property owners were so insistent that the council demanded immediate action in moving the cars to some other location.

Balboa Theater

Based upon the law that every man is innocent until proven guilty, "The Blind Goddess", opening at the Balboa Theatre Sunday, brings to the screen a heart-interest drama, in which love and duty, romance and a murder-mystery are some of the complex elements.

The story, directed by Victor Fleming, is based on the Arthur Train novel of the same name, which originally appeared in serial form in "The Designer." Hope Loring and Louis D. Lighton attended to the film adaptation.

Matching the plot in strength and power is the formidable cast Director Fleming has assembled, featuring a quartet of stellar players—Jack Holt, Esther Ralston, Ernest Torrence and Louise Driver.

Excellent and unusual stage divertissement is promised by Fanchon and Marco in the presentation of "Gilded Kisses", a supremely colorful revue. The ingeniously welded array of talent appearing includes Renie Riano, feature artist, known as "the girl with the India rubber legs," Miss Riano was a sensation with Irving Berlin's Music Box Revue on Broadway. An all star cast headed by Helene Hughes will interpret Fanchon and Marco's idea of "Gilded Kisses".

George Stollberg and the Balboa Music Masters introduce the musical scores for both screen and stage presentations. The News-Reel, a comedy and other short reels conclude the exceptional entertainment offered to Balboa patrons.

Cabrillo Theater

Elenore Boardman and Conrad Nagel, whose appearance together in several pictures within the last year has established them as one of the most popular "teams" in motion pictures, play the leading roles in John M. Stahl's production of "Memory Lane", which he directed for Louis B. Mayer. This picture of simple home life comes to the Cabrillo Theatre for a week, starting Saturday.

There is as much romance in the family wash tub as in a king's castle—that is, if you can get it out.

This is the theory of John M. Stahl, film producer, who says that he would rather make pictures the characters of which are common everyday folk than those displaying millionaires and royalty.

"It is the everyday folk about us that make the world go round," he explains. "All in all, they are vastly more important than the persons who stand on top of the earth and conclude that everyone else is hidden in their shadow."

"I believe that the romance and drama is the average American home eclipses anything that ever can happen within the gilded doors of kings or the socially elect."

In "Memory Lane", the producer tells a story of life and love in a small town. Eleanor Boardman, Conrad Nagel and William Haines head a large cast of excellent players. It is a First National picture.

Raymond Godden has arranged a special harmonious scoring for the feature picture, and in addition will play on the pipe-organ another one of his popular novelty selections. Kinograms and other short reels add flavor to a good entertainment.
